

Denali National Park

Located in Interior Alaska, Denali National Park is famous for being home to Mt. McKinley, which is the highest mountain in North America. The word "Denali" means "the High One." The translation actually refers to Mt McKinley itself, which was named after President William McKinley. Like many other National Parks in Alaska, Denali National Park is home to a diverse population of wildlife. These may include deer, wolves, Dall sheep, bears, moose and caribou.

The 90-mile road into Denali Park has restricted access. Private vehicles are only permitted along the first 14 miles. Since the rest of the area is most definitely worth exploring, you will definitely want to plan to take a Denali National Park tour. They provide a fantastic Denali National Park tour that allows you to explore the habitats that support big-game species such as black bear, grizzly, moose, caribou, Dall sheep, wolf, and wolverine.

If you decide to take a scenic flight of the Alaska Range, you can get a magnificent aerial view of Mt McKinley. The professional pilots of these planes land on one of Mt. McKinley's glacial areas, where you can take a hike along the ice. Denali, Alaska offers a variety of unique and exciting activities for an adventurous vacation. If you are looking for a travel destination that does not fall into the category of same old, same old, it behooves you to plan a trip to Denali, Alaska.